Fluoride program expanded

Care to be cavity-free? The expansion of a no-cost health unit dental program can help ensure more children and teens in the area achieve just that.

This fall, the Haliburton, Kawartha, Pine Ridge District Health Unit will again offer its popular fluoride varnish program for children attending daycares and Kindergarten classrooms across Haliburton County, Northumberland County and the City of Kawartha Lakes. Information about the voluntary, no-charge fluoride varnish program provided right at local schools or daycares will be sent home with preschoolers and JK/SK students in early September.

For students in higher grades, there is also good news as the fluoride varnish program is now available to all local youth up to 17 years of age. For these students, the fluoride varnish program will be offered on an appointment basis at health unit clinics in Lindsay and Port Hope. To learn more, call the health unit toll-free at 1-888-599-9399, text (705) 878-2723, or visit www.hkpr.on.ca.

"If your child previously had fluoride varnish care at a daycare or in kindergarten, he or she can continue to benefit from the program right through elementary and high school," says Anna Rusak, an oral health promoter with the HKPR District Health Unit. "The same goes for any older sisters or brothers who may not have been able to access fluoride varnish care in the past."

Fluoride varnish is a protective coating that is brushed on a child's teeth, helping prevent new cavities by making the tooth enamel harder. The application of fluoride varnish is approved by Health Canada and the Canadian Dental Association. "Fluoride varnish is recommended twice a year, every year, as an effective way to fight tooth decay," Rusak says. "Fluoride varnish goes hand-in-hand with daily brushing and regular visits to the dentist, as part of a healthy lifestyle for a cavity-free childhood."

The expansion of the fluoride varnish program is due to recent changes to the provincial Healthy Smiles Ontario dental support program. For the local health unit, the changes apply due to the fact no communities in its jurisdiction currently add fluoride to their municipal drinking water systems.

Rusak welcomes the expanded Fluoride Varnish program, especially in helping to combat childhood tooth decay in the region. It's a problem that typically affects up to 40 per cent of local JK and SK students who are screened by the health unit.

"Tooth decay is one of the most preventable childhood diseases, yet we still see many JK and SK students in the area who suffer from the problem," Rusak notes. "Expanding the fluoride varnish program to more youth in our area will help reduce the risk of cavities."

The plein facts

Living Large

Humour by Steve Galea

Our local plein air art festival will be here soon. Plein air essentially means outside. This is a wonderful way to see art being prepared and displayed. Also just the term plein air adds certain elegance to the subject.

Here are 10 reasons why that name was chosen:

1. The term wildlife art sounds horrible if you say it fast.
2. It was better than the "Now you won't make a mess inside" art festival.
3. Plein air art attracts pilots in Newfoundland.
4. If it rains on a similar festival in Madrid people can finally have reason to say, "The rain in Spain falls mainly on the plein."
5. Anyone against the festival can be labelled a con-pleiner.
6. Plein air is way better than polluted air.
7. It's not exactly Fantasy Island but you can still yell, "The plein! The plein!"
8. The fancy air art festival sounded pompous.
9. Organizers like saying, "I love it when a plein comes together."
10. Experimental artists can be on an alternate plein.

Concert series to feature clarinet expert

Saturday, Sept. 24 is the date of the second concert of the season for the Haliburton Concert Series.

Join us for a wonderful evening of music with multi-instrumentalist, Michele Jacot. She's an expert on clarinet, saxophone, flute, and piccolo, and will play all of them during the concert. Works by Brahms, Debussy, Shostakovich, and Finzi will be included. Michele will be accompanied by pianist Sonya Sim, who will also play a few short works for piano.

Michele has a vast musical background, including playing with symphony and opera orchestras, the Shaw Festival, and in theatre pits for Mirvish Productions. She is the artistic director of the Wychwood Clarinet Choir, assistant conductor for Canadian music icon Howard Cable, and is demand as a teacher, clinician, and adjudicator.

The concert will take place in the Northern Lights Performing Arts Pavilion at 7:30 p.m.

Tickets are available from June Smith at 705-457-3272 or june.smith705@gmail.com. Adults $30, students $10.

Further information about the series is available on our website: www.haliburtoncs.blogspot.com.

We hope to see you there!

Something old and something new

Linda Coneybeare
Travel Plus

Let's start with the something new. For those of you walking Haliburton's busy main street starting Friday, Aug. 19 you will have seen lots of activity here at our office. I can't tell you the number of people who stopped to ask what's happening. Is Travelplus gone? I even had calls at home, concerned that the travel agency was shutting down. Not at all! Machenzie and I are back up and running and check out our brand new look. We are now called Transat Travel. We have (since 2001) been a corporately owned office of Transat AT, which also owns Transat Holidays, Air Transat, and many Marlin Travel and Travelplus offices across Canada. Our branch in Haliburton was the last corporate Travelplus office to be renovated and converted to a Transat Travel office. That's not all that is new. Beautiful new paint design, murals on the walls, new furniture – our office is stunning!

There will be a grand opening later in the fall when everyone not quite so busy, but in the meantime feel free to come by and see our exciting new look!

Now then for the something old. As Machenzie and I here at Transat Travel begin a new fall and winter travel season I am reflecting back to the past year in Travel: where I have been, where I still want to go.

In October 2015 I had the great luck to be able to travel in Iceland, a country I had wanted to visit for years. Icelandic Air offers nonstop flights from Toronto to Reykjavik and with just a 5.5 hour flight and just a four hour time difference it is the closest European country to North America. It was such an interesting experience. This country has open steam fissures, volcanoes, breath taking waterfalls and the most amazing Northern Lights. I thought that this would be the highlight of my travel experience and then the next month I went to Jordan.

Although Jordan is surrounded by some wartorn countries it is a friendly nation welcoming tourists to this amazing country: The ancient city of Petra, the Roman ruins of Jerash, the Red Sea resort city of Aqaba, floating on the Dead Sea and staying at the beautiful five star hotels, but most of all Wadi Rum Desert. For all of you who saw Matt Damon in The Martian it was filmed in this desert as the red sand most resembled Mars. It was stunning! Breathtaking! Definitely the highlight of my travel career, and I have been to the Great Wall of China, the Pyramids of Egypt and pretty much everywhere else.

In February, on the coldest weekend (-42°C in my carport that morning) I flew to Malaga with Air Transat and spent a week with my sister and her husband in a resort town in sunny Spain. What a great visit, and a winter escape to lots of sun but not high heat (I don't do high heat very well).

In March, I spent a week with my son Patrick and family in Key Largo, Fla. Our family friendly condo rental was right on the Gulf of Mexico. We enjoyed a day trip to Key West, another day to a Dolphin Sanctuary, but mainly just relaxing at the beach being together.

April found me in Holland with AMA Waterways experiencing "Tulips and Windmills" of Holland and Belgium. Belgian Chocolate, Belgian waffles and a River Cruise. It was great!

Later in the spring two new grandchildren arrived: my daughter Chloe and husband Peter had a beautiful boy Choi- Levi, and one month later Patrick and Jashelle had their third child, a beautiful girl named Copper, adding to their family. My grandchild quota doubled in one month from two to four! Sunny days, indeed!

What travel plans will next year bring?

Needless to say, I haven't travelled since. Too busy enjoying my family and now this wonderful renovated office!

I will be getting the travel bug soon. Next year perhaps Croatia? Scotland? Argentina? Not quite sure yet.

Our winter books are here and Machenzie and I busy booking winter vacations for our clients and the ever popular river cruises for 2017.

Where is a new destination? I find that more and more of our clients are searching for one of those take-your-breath-away experiences so besides Wadi Rum, how about Patagonia? Trafalgar Tours offers an amazing tour of Chile and Argentina via mountains, glaciers and lakes.

As I said before please come by and see our wonderful new office. What a great job done by Jason Reay construction! Our new sign created by Vista Signs and it looks great.

So from Linda and Machenzie at Transat Travel, hope to see you soon!

Exploring the backyards of Haliburton County

By Angela Long

It may be "The Devil Made Me Do It" that catches your eye, or "On Bonnie's Pond." Whatever your fancy, Hike Haliburton's glossy 2016 Program Guide and Map has got it covered. The guide lists over 80 hikes throughout all of Haliburton County ranging from half a kilometre in length to 19 kilometres, from strolling past historic wooden log chutes to scaling the heights of Green Mountain.

The 14th annual festival is the signature event of the County of Haliburton, says Hike Haliburton Festival project manager Barrie Martin, showcasing the region's heritage, art, and natural features. The region's gems are so plentiful, organizers have added another day to the festival, which is set to begin on Thursday, Sept. 22 and last until Sunday, Sept. 25.

"It's a chance to explore and better appreciate what the Haliburton Highlands is all about," Martin says, for those new to the county, or for the hundreds of cottagers who return specifically for an event that falls smack dab between Labour Day and Thanksgiving.

But the festival is just as much for the locals.

"People notoriously do not explore their own backyards," Martin says, and Hike Haliburton is the perfect chance to do so.

If the numbers are any indicator, the locals agree. Thirty to 40 per cent of festival participants call Haliburton County home. But whether a newcomer, cottager, or local, registration numbers continue to rise. Currently, more than 800 are registered for Hike Haliburton. Martin expects at least 2,500 participants this year. Every year for the past four years, registration has risen by 20 per cent. Twelve of the festival's most popular hikes, including the "Ritchie Falls Nature Ramble" and "Backpacking with the Happy Camper" – an overnighter with Kevin Callan who Martin calls the "celebrity of the outdoors" – are already full. They've even run out of brochures. The colourful guides – complete with a generous map of the county – have become such coveted objects that Martin has ordered another print run.

The festival also gives hikers a chance to explore other people's backyards without fear of a trespassing charge. Join the Pflugs for the "Stouffer Mill Strut," the Tylers for "Cow Paths and Deer Runs," the Dawsons for "The Poetry of Maple."

Martin has been lacing up his hiking boots in Haliburton County since 1976, and has been involved with Hike Haliburton since its inception. Nevertheless, he still discovers new experiences in the county's endless supply of outdoor thrills.

"I'm very passionate about the Haliburton Highlands," he says, "and I believe in the principles of eco-tourism. Hiking is a sport where you can enjoy the land with minimum impact."

For those still wondering whether or not to participate in Canada's largest hiking festival, Martin says this is a rare opportunity to get involved, to share the trails with friends, neighbours, and strangers in a safe environment, led by carefully chosen guides who, in most cases, are certified Hike Ontario hike leaders trained in group management skills, risk management, wilderness first aid. Two hike volunteers also accompany each outing, assisting guides with safety and organization. This year, the festival is also offering safety training for the hikers themselves with a day-long safe hiker course on Wednesday, Sept. 21 at a discounted rate. Hikes are capped at a maximum of 15 to 30 participants to allow for a high-quality hike. Martin recalls the days before this limit was set and 90 people showed up for a mushroom hike.

"You can imagine how that went," he says.

Even if you're more of an armchair hiker, the festival aims to please featuring six concerts, storytelling, a Blister Ball, a fundraising radiothon and barbecue, a fall harvest dinner, a fall equinox sacred fire, and, to top it all off, the Haliburton Highlands' biggest picnic ever – a "celebration of food, art, and outdoor living" in Head Lake Park.

Martin stresses that while the core of the festival is hiking, organizers want to "spread the benefits" as far as possible. All trails lead to the heart of the community, with every event enriching the experience for everyone. This year, Hike Haliburton has engaged as many businesses as possible, setting up Hikequarters, Food Stops, Featured Accommodations and Rejuvenation Stops. Participating businesses will display signs inviting festival-goers to "Stay here. Eat here. Relax here."

> "Hiking is a sport where you can enjoy the land with minimum impact."

> — Hike Haliburton Festival project manager Barrie Martin

While the festival has been cursed by rain every year for the past 13 years, Martin remains hopeful the spell has been broken. Regardless, he says, "there's always adventure in the rain."

The blue dot movement is back

By Heather Ross, Haliburton Highlands Blue Dot team

Last fall, the four townships, the county and 1,600 citizens of Haliburton County showed their support of our right to a healthy environment through an amendment to the Canadian Constitution.

In Ontario, the David Suzuki Foundation, leading the movement for a constitutional right to a healthy environment, is asking Ontarians to participate in the review of the Ontario Environmental Bill of Rights (EBR), continuing the effort to ensure our right to a healthy environment. Indeed the Ministry of the Environment and Climate Change (MOECC), in the review of the EBR, is asking Ontarians to comment on entrenchment of our right to a healthy environment. For more information go to www.ebr.gov.on.ca and type in EBR Registry Number: 012-8002.

The Ontario Environmental Bill of Rights when it was passed in 1993 was groundbreaking legislation. "The EBR provides for public participation, transparency and accountability in the Ontario government's environmental decisions. In particular, the EBR gives Ontario residents the right to know about — and comment on — proposed decisions that may affect the environment. They also have the right to ask for legislative and policy reviews, and investigations of wrongdoing. The Environmental Commissioner of Ontario is the guardian of the EBR." (The Environmental Bill of Rights. Your environment, your rights. The Environmental Commissioner of Ontario p.3)

In the over two decades that the EBR has been in force, much has changed in our environmental knowledge. Just think what we knew of climate change in 1993 and what we now know! It is time for a review and renewal. The David Suzuki Foundation and Eco justice are recommending the following changes to the EBR:

- Recognize substantive environmental rights; that is the right to clean air, clean water, safe food, access to nature, freedom from pollution and the right to participate in environmental decision making.
- Update the purpose of the act to include newer principles such as "zero discharge," "polluter pays," the "precautionary principle" and the key concept of "intergenerational equity."
- Apply environmental justice principles; it has become evident over the decades that poor and indigenous peoples suffer disproportionately from environmental hazards and degradation.
- Allow reasonable opportunity for judicial review; decisions made under the act are very difficult to challenge and very costly.

For more information go to www.ecojustice.ca/taking-a-look-at-ontarios-environmental-bill-rights/#sthash.x6zVJ4FK.dpuf.

The Blue Dot movement, Ontario, has created a lovely card on which to make your comments for the EBR review. The cards will be gathered and taken directly to the legislature at the end of October to obtain a card and submit it, come to the next Enviro-Cafe, Tuesday, Sept. 13 at 7:30 at the Minden United Church. We will be able to provide more information and answer questions at the café.

The MOECC has developed a discussion guide and set of questions for the review. You can find a link to the guide at www.ebr.gov.on.ca, type in the EBR Registry Number: 012-8002. You may submit comments directly to EBRreview@ontario.ca.

Let's keep up the work and show Ontario that we Haliburtonians continue to care for our environment and are willing to take action.

See you at the Enviro-Cafe.

New workshop for mindful living

By Angela Long

As the leaves turn and temperatures cool, it's time to Fall into Fabulousness. On Saturday, Sept. 24, Grow Optimism Consultants owner and life coach Nancy Brownsberger facilitates the first of four events in the Sunny Saturday Morning Series: "Fiercely Focused Fabulousness – RSVP to your life!"

If you "find yourself racing from one item on your to-do list to the next, checking off the tick boxes" then wondering where the day went, this workshop is for you, says Brownsberger.

From 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. participants will learn the art of "self-care magnificence" in seven clear and easy steps. The new workshop will take place overlooking Head Lake at SIRCH Central.

A former attendee of one of Brownsberger's "Nurture" workshop writes, "She is a living, breathing example of what mindful living can do."

Find out for yourself by calling or texting 705-854-1189 to register for an early bird rate, or email brownsbergernancy@gmail.com

Other upcoming Sunny Saturday Morning events: Oct. 4 – five-week mindfulness/yoga class at Light Hatch Yoga, Oct. 15 – Soul Collage for youth at SIRCH Central, Nov. 19 – Soul Collage for Adults at SIRCH Central.

Get a second opinion on your financial health

Thinking Money

Elizabeth O'Connor

My husband once quipped that he thinks some people have a harder time leaving their investment advisor than they do a marriage. But what should be foremost in your mind at all times truly is your financial well-being.

Everyone agrees that when it comes to your physical health a second opinion always makes sense. As your financial well-being also contributes to your peace of mind, a second opinion on your financial health is also important.

Now nobody wants their finances to consume their lives, so the ideal is to find an investment advisor or financial planner you can trust and whose primary goal is to do what's right by you, someone you sense is confident in the relationship because their purpose is to achieve your financial goals with a strategy designed for your specific situation.

A good advisor is one familiar with the marketplace, and all the products available to better your investment portfolio. Someone who is not afraid to say "I don't know, but I will find out for you." Someone who will lean on other experts and all available resources to find the solutions you need. Someone who has a real grasp of the complications of financial theory and language. But their real value will show through with their ability to simplify all these complications, so you thoroughly understand your financial situation today and the plan going forward.

When do you know if you need a second opinion? First and foremost (and as odd as it sounds), if you are too afraid to seek a second opinion, you need one immediately. You may be afraid because with all the market turmoil you are pretty sure "you're not richer than you think" and the mere thought of a reality check is terrifying. Maybe your life is getting complicated as the family grows, your income rises, or you receive an inheritance. Perhaps you need to look at insurance issues and it is something you are happy putting off. Maybe you truly do not have an accurate picture of your financial well-being and it somehow just seems easier to forget about it and assume it will all work out.

If your investment person makes you feel like you know nothing about your own finances and you should buy what they're selling without question, it's time for a second opinion.

As your situation becomes more complicated, you should expect your advisor to sit you down with specialists more in tune with the needs of financially well-off clients, such as estate and trust advisors, insurance, business and estate planning specialists. If that is not happening, again, it's time for a second opinion.

Good financial health for all of you.

Whether you are looking for a full time, full service financial advisor or seeking expert financial advice as a second opinion, call Elizabeth. With offices in Haliburton, Huntsville and Bracebridge, Elizabeth works closely with clients in cottage country from the lakes and surrounding towns.

More than 50 children waiting for mentors

Big Brothers Big Sisters of Kawartha Lakes-Haliburton would like to remind everyone that September is Big Brother Big Sister Month right across Canada. Volunteers provide so many opportunities and wonderful new experiences to children through mentoring programs. Their commitment has a huge impact on the community, helping children and youth reach their full potential and make positive decisions that will affect their lives for years to come. It is also the perfect month for people to consider becoming a mentor through Big Brothers Big Sisters of Kawartha Lakes-Haliburton.

Volunteering as a mentor can take as little as one hour a week through the in-school mentoring program, this program is very easy to fit into a weekly schedule. There is always a child waiting to meet you!

Big Brothers Big Sisters of Kawartha Lakes-Haliburton would like to thank all of the volunteers that have made the commitment to mentor a child; the volunteers are the ones that make the difference. There continues to be over 50 children waiting for a mentor in The City of Kawartha Lakes and Haliburton County, so if you are interested in this kind of friendship please call 705-324-6800 for more information on the application process or visit www.bigbrothersbigsisters.info.

Long-term care home needs volunteers

By Jenn Watt

On Sunday mornings, Carol Stewart makes her way to Highland Wood long-term care home where she visits with the residents, reading to some, helping where she can.

If she can't make it on time, they notice.

"If I'm late, the ones in the lobby are like, 'where have you been?' They tend to worry about me too, I guess," says Stewart, who has been volunteering at the Haliburton facility for the last three years and says the residents there are as close to her as family.

She first got involved when her mother was a resident at the home, run by Haliburton Highlands Health Services. Stewart would come to see her mom and while she was there, would help with other tasks. It might be wheeling a resident to the washroom or helping someone get her cardigan on properly.

After her mother died, Stewart continued visiting and has become a regular, passionate volunteer.

"I just find by coming here I know it's helping and I make them laugh and they give me such great affection," she says.

She assists with the pub night, church services and comes by regularly in between to help wherever she's needed.

Stewart is one of a handful of volunteers at the long-term care home. She urges others to join her.

"If you can spend an hour a week, Highland Wood long-term care has some lonely residents who would love a visit," she wrote in a message to the paper. "Come for an hour and see if you can find a friend. Some like to talk; some like to listen. A few ladies would like their nails polished. The gentlemen enjoy a chat about cars or sports. Perhaps a game of euchre, cribbage, even poker … Give it a try. You will feel grateful and glad when you leave. You may even want to return. I did!"

HHHS's volunteer co-ordinator Brigitte Gebauer says they are looking for "a broad spectrum" of volunteers and are flexible about hours and tasks.

People are needed to come in for friendly visiting, helping in the dining room when residents are eating, helping with activities and HHHS is also starting a palliative team for Highland Wood (a more specialized kind of volunteering that requires additional training).

Highland Wood volunteer Carol Stewart reads to resident Willis Harrison of Maple Lake during one of her visits to the Haliburton-based long-term care home. Highland Wood is run by Haliburton Highlands Health Services, which is looking for additional volunteers to visit with residents and help out with various programs and activities. JENN WATT Staff

"We're going to be really flexible, just like we are with all of our other volunteer opportunities," she says. "If you have an hour a week or 10 hours a week, you're welcome because any little bit would be helpful."

Anyone interested in volunteering should get in touch with Gebauer at 705-457-1392 ext. 2927 or email bgebauer@hhhs.ca.
